Master Management Consultant (MMC)

Master Management Consulting training at AIAL offers a combination of academic research strategies and consultancy approaches to give students the tools necessary for a career as a consultant. It also emphasizes strong personal, research and interviewing skills, which helps students select the most appropriate tools for formulating their arguments, for avoiding pitfalls and for providing their clients with real added value.

Over the last decades consultancies are growing, and so is their share in the professional service industry. There is a growing demand for guidance in change processes, for specific expert knowledge, for application of knowledge and for tailor made research that can support decision making processes. Management consultants thus support the management function in organizations as external adviser.
